

It

trade and ities.
ed by sea
ainland
er fattening
for livestock
as Islay and arrive in or Stirling,
journeys
gland or

l-equipped to s by road
oom,
n dictates
regular in straw-
aded on to ourney.
abt the
orted abroad
standard,
orted live for
sn't make ould we arter" - hides
y, why export
slaughtering

TV star Gok Wan is partner in events company

Continued from Back Page

moment, which is brilliant. It's amazing, especially in this climate. We couldn't have asked to be this busy to begin with. We have a very very strong 12 months."

He added: "We're not looking to book lots and lots and lots of events and find ourselves run off our feet. What we want to do is the work we have brought in and really concentrate on the quality of what we are doing."

Wan might be famous for his television work, but he received a grounding in business from an early age having grown up in and around the restaurant owned by his father.

With the new venture Wan said he will lead on the creative, financial and development side, with M Ferguson overseeing the production of the events. The pair have brought on board a managing director, Natalie Sturge who "marries the two of them together".

Wan said: "Because Pete is based in Scotland and I'm based in London it works really well. It means we are not sitting in each other's pockets."

"We also know our strengths. From a running the company point of view it's myself and Natalie, but when the events come in that's Peter's forte. He gets heavily involved, rolls up his sleeves and makes sure it all happens."

Asked whether he had any concerns about Brexit Wan said that while he was "worried and nervous... we cannot live in fear. We have not forgotten about it and we are respecting it. But we are not going to let it hold us back either."

Mr Ferguson said "Merging my company PDF Productions, with the Fashion Brunch Clubs has cemented the partnership with Gok, who brings his unquestionable flair and expertise to the business. This will really offer added value and, dare we say, a little star quality to our events."

For Sale